Day-Use Amenities

The Cove Palisades has three day-use areas, one on the Crooked River arm of the reservoir and two on the Deschutes River. Each has a boat ramp, courtesy dock, sandy beaches, picnic sites, and a restroom. Day-use parking permits are required. Your camping receipt serves as a daily permit for each of the days you are registered. You can purchase a daily permit from a nearby day-use ticket dispenser. 12- and 24-month day-use permits are sold by merchants near the park and at major state park offices.

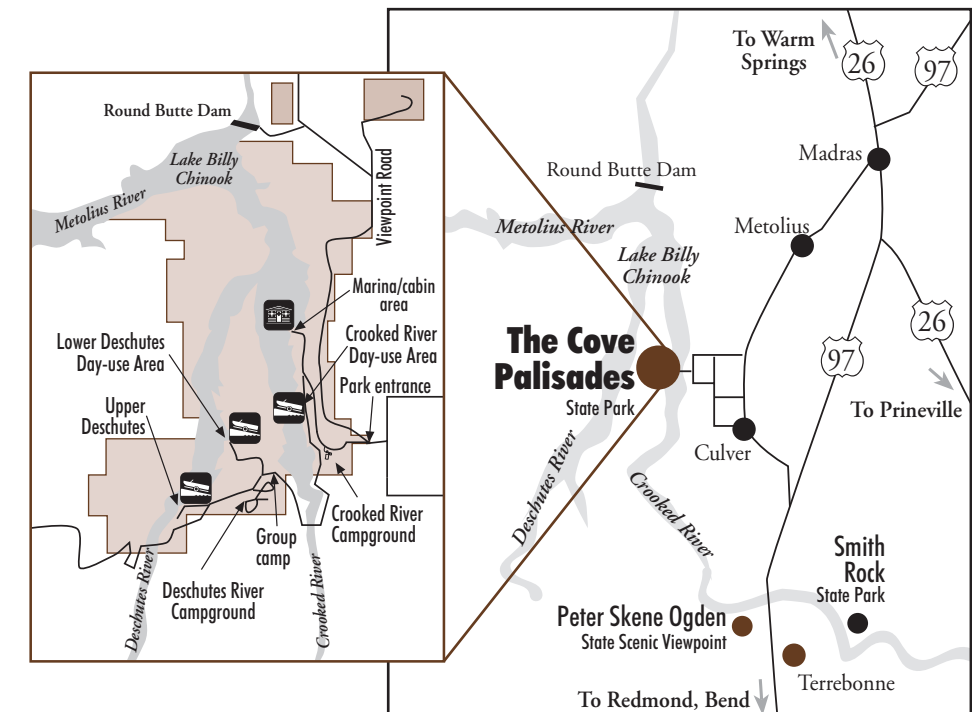

Smoking in Oregon State Parks is allowed only in personal vehicles, RVs, campsites and portions of day use parks along state highways that are designated as safety rest areas by the Oregon Department of Transportation.

Shaped by Fire and Water

Geologists say that 10-12 million years ago, alternating layers of stream sediments, volcanic debris, and basaltic lava flows from the Cascade Range were deposited into a huge basin in this area. Named "The Deschutes Formation," these exposed layers of material were capped by lava flows from Cascade volcanoes three million years ago. This cap, known as "The Rimrock Basalt," is easily seen throughout the park high atop the cliffs. Subsequent periods of water erosion and volcanic activity have formed the dramatic canyons and vertical cliffs seen today.

Named "The Cove" by the original homesteader, the word "Palisades" refers to the tall column-like formations in the basalt rimrocks. Lake Billy Chinook was formed by the construction of Round Butte Dam in 1964 and named for a Wasco tribesman who guided explorer John C. Fremont through the area in 1843.

Ancient area inhabitants carved mysterious symbols into a massive boulder called the "Crooked River Petroglyph." It lies near the group camp below a formation called Ship Rock.
