Site History

A place for a capitol building was a part of the original vision for the city of Salem as early as 1846. The site was laid out in plat by William Willson, a lay member of the Methodist Mission and prominent Salem citizen. Many important mid-19th century institutions were located within this plat, including the Methodist Church, Oregon Institute (later Willamette University), county courthouse, post office and capitol.

William Willson and his wife Chloe donated their land around Willson Avenue to the city of Salem in 1853. Part of the land was used for the new territorial statehouse, with the remaining acres zoned for a public park. The former Willson Avenue was renamed to Willson Park, and is the site we know today.

The Breyman Fountain is the only historic object remaining in Willson Park today. The fountain, originally used as a horse watering trough, was a gift from the Breyman family to the city of Salem in 1904. The statue atop the fountain fell off in the late 1930s. The city planned to reattach the statue but it mysteriously disappeared a few years later. The statue’s current whereabouts are unknown; some theorize it fell victim to a scrap drive during World War II.

Capitol number two, which burned down in 1935.

State Capitol State Park

Welcome to State Capitol State Park. The grounds surrounding Oregon’s capitol building are owned by the people of Oregon, and since 2008 have been managed by Oregon State Parks. The 21-acre T-shaped property is known as the Capitol Mall, and is home to two smaller parks: Willson Park, west of the capitol, and Capitol Park, to the east.

The grounds’ statues, fountains, trees, marble intaglios, special plantings and commemorative markers create a sense of history and place. Stone plaques set in the mall sidewalks list the county seat and establishment date for each of Oregon’s 36 counties.

Visiting the Building

The capitol building is overseen by the Oregon State Legislature through the Legislative Administration Committee. It is not part of Oregon State Parks. The building hosts a number of permanent and visiting exhibits, artwork and historical information. Visitors can find self-guided tour options, escorted tour schedules, exhibit information and a gift store within the Capitol.

Walking Tour

The grounds of State Capitol State Park are 21 acres zoned for a public park. The former Willson Park, west of the capitol, and Capitol Park, to the east.

On the Willson Park side of the street, flags from every state in the union encircle the Moon Tree, a state heritage tree. The young Douglas-fir was grown from a seed carried aboard the Apollo 14 mission in 1971.

The Moon Tree is one among many; nearly 75 species of trees are planted in the park. The sturdy native conifers combined with non-native trees and smaller ornaments give the park an arboretum-like feel. In spring, dozens of cherry trees come into bloom, creating a soft pink carpet as the days lengthen.
