Shaped by Fire and Water

Geologists say that 10–12 million years ago, alternating layers of stream sediments, volcanic debris, and basaltic lava flows from the Cascade Range were deposited into a huge basin in this area. Named “The Deschutes Formation,” these exposed layers of material were capped by lava flows from Cascade volcanoes three million years ago. This cap, known as “The Rimrock Basalt,” is visible throughout the park high atop the cliffs. Subsequent periods of water erosion and volcanic activity formed today’s dramatic canyons and vertical cliffs.

Named “The Cove” by the original homesteader, the word “Palisades” refers to the tall column-like formations in the basalt rimrocks. Lake Billy Chinook was formed by the construction of Round Butte Dam in 1964.

Ancient area inhabitants carved mysterious symbols into a massive boulder called the “Crooked River Petroglyph.” It lies near the group camp below a formation called Ship Rock.
